RE: House Bill No. 24-57

The Honorable Edmund S. Villagomez
Speaker of the House of Representatives
Twenty-Fourth Northern Marianas
Commonwealth Legislature
Capitol Hill
Saipan, MP 96950

Dear Mr. Speaker:

Your Committee on Judiciary and Governmental Operations to which was referred:

House Bill No. 24-57: To re-establish a Government Liability cap.

begs leave to report as follows:

I. RECOMMENDATION:

After considerable discussion, your Committee recommends that House Bill No. 24-57 be passed by the House in its current form.

II. ANALYSIS:

A. Purpose:

The purpose of House Bill No. 24-57 is to re-establish government liability caps for damages to ensure fiscal stability and uphold sovereign immunity in response to the Maratita v. CHCC decision.

TO THE CLERK'S OFFICE RECEIVED BY
DATE 10/21/2025 TIME 1:02pm

B. Committee Findings:

Your Committee finds that sovereign immunity shields the government and its employees from lawsuits unless explicitly authorized by the Legislature. In Maratita v. CHCC, the Supreme Court emphasized that the existing statutory caps on damages lacked adequate support under the equal protection clause, undermining the separation of powers and threatening the CNMI's fiscal stability. To address this, the legislation establishes clear, evidence-backed liability limits, ensuring balanced accountability and responsible fiscal management. These caps are tied to factual data such as actuarial reports, aligning with the standard that limits must be reasonable and sustainable within the CNMI's current fiscal realities. Historically, in 1983, the CNMI's total budget was approximately $51 million; today, for Fiscal Year 2026, it is roughly $179.7 million. After mandatory expenses like debt, healthcare, and utilities, the remaining funds are limited, making the proposed caps of $50,000 for wrongful death, $100,000 per person, and $200,000 per occurrence both appropriate and necessary to protect the government's financial stability while still providing fair compensation.

Your Committee further finds that the CNMI government's expenses have grown significantly alongside its workforce and operational costs, with substantial debt requiring ongoing borrowing. Revenue streams remain volatile due to natural disasters, a pandemic, and geopolitical factors impacting tourism. Without reasonable damage caps, large judgments could force the government to cut essential services, lay off employees, or incur unsustainable debt, jeopardizing fiscal stability. The experience of other jurisdictions, such as Massachusetts, Virginia, Nevada, and Guam, each applying damage limits between $100,000 and $300,000, demonstrates that such caps are widely accepted, upheld under the equal protection clause, and represent best practice in balancing government accountability with fiscal prudence.

Your Committee finds that controlling litigation costs is vital for preventing deficits and ensuring uninterrupted services. Since the original caps were enacted in 1983, claims for death and injury have increased substantially along with population growth and rising medical costs, heightening the risk of overwhelming liabilities. The set caps reflect responsible stewardship of taxpayer funds by balancing the need for meaningful recovery with the government's ability to sustain operations and meet its obligations. These standards align with mainstream American legal principles and the CNMI's unique fiscal constraints. Furthermore, the Legislature maintains full constitutional authority over sovereign immunity decisions, and the articulation of these damage caps is a prudent exercise of that power, not an infringement on judicial authority. The amendments in the Commonwealth Code to Title 7, Civil Procedure, Division 2, Actions and Special Proceedings, Chapter 2, Actions Against the Commonwealth, Section 2202, Limitation of Tort Liability, explicitly define the government's tort liability limits, establishing transparent, supported caps that promote fiscal stability, adjust for inflation, and adapt to the CNMI's evolving fiscal landscape.

D. Legislative History:

On August 29, 2025, Representative Edmund S. Villagomez introduced House Bill No. 24-57. On that same date, House Bill No. 24-57 was subsequently referred to the House Standing Committee on Judicial and Governmental Operations for disposition.

E. Cost Benefit:

The enactment of House Bill No. 24-57 will likely result in minimal to no additional costs to the CNMI government. This legislation reaffirms a reasonable, evidence-based cap on government liability for tort damages, aligning with established national practices and ensuring fiscal stability. Since the bill primarily sets clear limits on damages, such as $50,000 for wrongful death and $100,000 per person, it enables the government to better predict and manage potential liabilities without imposing significant administrative or judicial costs. The already existing infrastructure for handling tort claims and the legislated limits ensure that enforcement and compliance can be maintained within current resources, minimizing fiscal impact.

Furthermore, the bill's alignment with comparable state practices, such as those in Massachusetts, Virginia, Nevada, and Guam, demonstrates that the proposed caps are widely accepted as reasonable and sustainable. These caps help prevent catastrophic liabilities and reduce the risk of large, unpredictable judgments that could otherwise deplete government resources, force layoffs, or impair essential services. By establishing these limits, the government can continue to operate within its constrained budget, especially given the CNMI's current fiscal realities and ongoing obligations such as healthcare, debt service, and utilities.

Overall, the legislation balances the needs for fair compensation with fiscal prudence, leveraging existing legal frameworks and current fiscal data. The predictable caps provide certainty for both the government and plaintiffs, reducing prolonged litigation costs and potential financial exposure. Because the measures are evidence-based and consistent with national standards, they safeguard the government's fiscal health while upholding the rights of claimants, ensuring that the costs of liability management remain controlled and sustainable.

III. CONCLUSION:

Your Committee is in accord with the intent and purpose of House Bill No. 24-57 and recommends its passage in its current form.

Re: H.B. 24-57 – To re-establish a Government Liability Cap

Hafa Adai, Tirow Chair Camacho and JGO Committee Members,

Following the Court's rejection of the Legislature's statutory establishment of a cap on damages to be paid by the Commonwealth for the negligent acts of its employees, the Commonwealth now operates without any liability protection. This legal vacuum creates an immediate crisis for all government services, particularly healthcare.

On behalf of the Commonwealth Healthcare Corporation (CHCC) and the healthcare community we serve, I write to express our urgent support for H.B. 24-57, which re-establishes essential government liability caps. Without immediate passage of this legislation, CHCC continues to face high risks of catastrophic financial exposure that would jeopardize essential healthcare services. No healthcare system, regardless of size or resources, can operate sustainably under unlimited liability exposure.

CHCC faces an existential threat that could devastate healthcare delivery across the Northern Mariana Islands without any liability caps in place. Adverse judgments without caps could severely affect CHCC's operating budget and force immediate reduction or closure of critical programs and services. One uncapped verdict does not just affect CHCC—it would impact all government services competing for the same limited funds.

The CNMI already faces serious healthcare workforce shortages. No liability protections increase the chances of losing physicians and adding yet another recruitment barrier for providers and other healthcare professionals. This is not a hypothetical. Current physicians have been expressing considerations to leave for jurisdictions with reasonable caps. CHCC physicians and staff are CNMI employees who need these protections. CHCC will also experience additional hardships in recruiting new specialists since they face unlimited personal and institutional exposure. Critical specialties like obstetrics, emergency medicine, and surgery—already difficult to staff—could become completely unavailable. Nursing and allied health professionals will follow, creating cascading workforce failures.

Further, without liability protection, defensive medicine will likely increase as no qualified physician will feel secure practicing under unlimited liability exposure. Defensive medicine drives up healthcare costs. Funds needed for patient care such as medications, equipment, and staff could also be diverted to legal defense, which is not how CHCC prioritizes consumption of limited resources.

The proposed caps of $50,000 for wrongful death, $100,000 per person, and $200,000 per occurrence are both reasonable and necessary. These limits match or exceed those in far wealthier jurisdictions. The CNMI, with less than 50,000 residents and extremely limited resources, cannot sustain unlimited liability when states and territories with vastly greater resources maintain these protective caps. The bill demonstrates that caps are tied to concrete fiscal realities, not arbitrary limits. The automatic increase when population exceeds 100,000 and the provision matching liability to insurance coverage show thoughtful balance between compensation and system sustainability.

While CHCC is our focus, H.B. 24-57 protects all essential services from catastrophic judgments. The bill's careful findings, supported by concrete fiscal data and comparable jurisdictions, satisfy the constitutional requirements while preserving healthcare system and other essential services. The alternative—unlimited liability—means no protection for all government services, with CHCC programs and services entailing high-risk professions being particularly vulnerable.

We urgently request swift passage of H.B. 24-57 to prevent healthcare system jeopardy and protect the wellbeing of all CNMI residents.

Dear Chairperson Camacho:

House Speaker Edmund Villagomez has authored HB 24-57 to re-establish a government liability cap on the damages the Commonwealth must pay in actions arising from negligent acts of Commonwealth employees. I strongly support the proposed legislation and urge the Committee to expedite its approval.

This bill is urgently necessary because the NMI Supreme Court held on December 30, 2024, that the previous Government Liability Act cap and general non-economic damages cap violated the NMI Constitution's equal protection clause.¹ See Maratita v. CHCC, 2024 MP 10. The previous Government Liability Act cap limited the Commonwealth's liability to $50,000 in actions for wrongful death and to $100,000 per person and $200,000 per occurrence for other torts. Now, without such caps in place, there is no limit to the amount of damages the Commonwealth may be required to pay. While the Attorney General strongly disagrees with the opinion in that case and will continue to argue for a more reasonable standard of review in future challenges to the equal protection clause, it is imperative that the Legislature promptly reassess the need for such caps to avoid catastrophically high claims in the meantime.

Government liability caps are standard in other jurisdictions and routinely upheld by the Courts. Our neighboring island of Guam, with a population over four times greater than the Commonwealth and a budget over five times higher than the most recent CNMI budget, has upheld its government liability cap of $100,000 for wrongful death and $300,000 for other tort actions. See Newby v. Gov't of Guam, 2010 Guam 4.² Furthermore, a review of caps set in other states shows that the amounts in HB 24-57 are well within the range of reasonable caps for much larger and wealthier jurisdictions.

¹ HB 24-57 only addresses the Government Liability Cap and does not re-instate the general non-economic damages cap that was overturned. The Legislature should separately consider whether it will re-enact such a cap.

² It is noteworthy that Justice Carbullido, who wrote the majority opinion in Newby and was a member of the panel of the NMI Supreme Court opinion rejecting the Commonwealth caps, held in Newby that: "We see no reason to depart from the widely-accepted rule that statutes limiting the amount of damages recoverable against government tortfeasors do not violate equal protection."

The budget of the Commonwealth would quickly be overwhelmed if these caps are not reinstated. Presently, 11 active Government Liability Act cases are pending in the NMI Superior Court, three of which were filed quickly after the cap was held unconstitutional. The total amount claimed in these cases is over $19 million. In addition to these claims, the Attorney General has received 3 notices of claims seeking damages that total over $30 million; one of those claims alone seeks $21.5 million. As is plainly apparent, the Government Liability Cap must be reinstated, or the coffers of the CNMI will quickly be overwhelmed by claims.

Only the Legislature should decide whether and how to waive governmental immunity and what compensation is available in lawsuits against the Commonwealth for employee negligence. The Supreme Court's decision does not undermine this. The Court's holding that the caps did not pass the heightened rational basis standard of review was primarily based on its finding that the stated purpose of protecting a young government no longer applies; this simply requires the Legislature to readopt the caps with a clear statement of the need supported by data and reasoning applicable today. In considering and drafting HB 24-57, the Legislature has clearly given serious thought to the circumstances surrounding these caps, evaluating fiscal needs, balancing fair compensation, and considering the long-term needs of the Commonwealth, which should be more than sufficient to withstand future scrutiny. There are always competing needs for the Commonwealth's limited resources. Salaries, debts, school funding, capital development, health care, and numerous other budgetary needs must be fulfilled through a predictable budget. Without these caps, any judgment against the Commonwealth could upset that balance.

If necessary, I strongly support this bill and will defend it before our courts. Thank you for acting quickly to protect our citizens from unpredictable judgments and catastrophic losses.

I am available to discuss further the issues raised in HB 24-57. Please feel free to contact me at (670) 237-7500 or email at attorney_general@cnmioag.org.

Sincerely,

EDWARD MANIBUSAN

STATE SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY AND TORT LIABILITY IN ALL 50 STATES

Sovereign or governmental immunity concern themselves with the various legal doctrines or statutes that provide federal, state, or local governments immunity from tort-based claims, as well as exceptions to or waivers of that immunity. Generally, a state government is immune from tort suits by individuals under the doctrine of sovereign immunity. The terms "sovereign immunity" and "governmental immunity" are frequently conflated, but they are entirely different legal concepts. Sovereign immunity protects the State and its divisions, including agencies, boards, hospitals, and universities; while "governmental immunity" technically only protects political subdivisions of the State including cities, counties, towns, villages, and school districts. Throughout the country, case law has continually conflated these two terms. For purposes of this chart we refer to both terms interchangeably.

Local governments, municipalities, and political subdivisions of the state are immune from tort suits by virtue of governmental immunity, because the state grants them immunity, usually in its constitution. This chart deals with state governmental immunity and liability. It should be noted that lawsuits against states, their officers, and employees are frequently asserted under federal law, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 1983, or other similar statutes. This chart deals only with the separate body of law governing state law tort claims against state governments. It does not cover federal claims under the Federal Tort Claims Act (FTCA) (28 U.S.C. § 2674), which is the subject of another chart found HERE, or claims of negligence against municipal, county, or local governments, which is the subject of another chart found HERE.

Generally

The common law origins of sovereign immunity can be traced back to the notion that the king made the laws, and thus anything the king did was necessarily legal. The doctrine was thought to pass through to the several states before the founding of this country. When the Constitution was drafted in 1787, Article III raised questions about this principle by exposing states to suits from citizens of other states and foreign states. U.S. Const. Art. III, § 2 ("The judicial Power shall extend ... to Controversies ... between a State and Citizens of another State ... and between a State ... and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects"). In 1793, the U.S. Supreme Court dealt with precisely this issue in Chisholm v. Georgia and abolished the doctrine of sovereign immunity with respect to states. Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 U.S. 419 (1793) ("the Constitution warrants a suit against a State, by an individual citizen of another State"). Several years later, in response to Chisholm, Congress proposed, and three-fourths of the states ratified, the 11th Amendment, which reinstated states' sovereign immunity, at least to the extent that Article III encroached upon it. Therefore, there could be no valid suit against a government entity. By the early 1800s, this sovereign immunity was adopted by nearly every state. However, the enjoyment of sovereign immunity is limited to government bodies that are truly "sovereign," namely the U.S. federal government and each state government. This presumed immunity was based on the belief that governments would be paralyzed if they faced potential liability for all actions of their employees. Sovereign immunity today has been limited or eliminated, at least in part, in most jurisdictions by either legislative or judicial action.

Still undecided was the issue of whether a state could be sued by its own citizens. For more than 100 years, states enjoyed protection from lawsuits, and the Supreme Court extended 11th Amendment protections to prohibit suits against a state by one of its citizens. Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U.S. 1 (1890). However, the doctrine began to weaken in 1908 when the Supreme Court ruled that sovereign immunity was not without exceptions and states could be sued for an unconstitutional action by the state. Ex parte Young, 209 U.S. 123 (1908). In 1946, the federal government passed the Federal Tort Claims Act, which waived sovereign immunity for itself with respect to torts. Federal Torts Claims Act, Pub. L. No. 79-601, ch. 753, 60 Stat. 842 (1946). Soon thereafter, state legislatures began to enact their own state tort claims acts.

A compromise doctrine subsequently developed at common law, whereby government officers could be held liable for the negligent performance of ministerial functions (operational acts involving carrying out policies), but not for discretionary functions (those involving policy setting and decision making). Restatement (Second) of Torts § 895D (1965). Immunity from liability for discretionary acts developed as an extension of the immunity afforded judicial officers to similarly shield legislative and administrative officials. The definition and application of the two types of functions evolved over time, causing confusion and uncertainty. Whenever suit was brought against an individual government employee because of his official conduct, the court had to consider the practical effects of liability and make a value judgment between the social and individual benefit from compensation to the victim, together with the wholesome deterrence of official excess on one hand; and on the other, the evils that would flow from inhibiting courageous and independent official action, and deterring responsible citizens from entering public life. Each state evolved differently with regard to its grant of sovereign immunity and the exceptions to immunity it provided.

Sovereign immunity today has been limited or eliminated, at least in part, in most jurisdictions by either legislative or judicial action. Today, in many states, Tort Claims Acts waive subrogation legislatively. The state statutes waiving sovereign immunity are generally of three types: (1) absolute waivers; (2) limited waivers applicable only to specific types of claims; and (3) general waivers subject to certain defined exceptions. The first type of statutory scheme simply abolishes state immunity altogether. They usually include a blanket statement of state liability for the torts of governmental entities and employees. The second type of statute maintains sovereign immunity overall but provides limited waivers of immunity for certain state acts. The third type provides a general waiver of sovereign immunity but lists several specified exceptions.

In many jurisdictions, government officials still enjoy immunity from liability in connection with the performance of their discretionary or governmental functions and acts. On the other hand, liability arising out of the negligent performance of a proprietary or ministerial act by a governmental official is not granted immunity. The doctrine of sovereign immunity varies from state-to-state but is usually contained either in a statutory framework (such as a Tort Claims Act) or within judicial and case decisions. Excluded from the doctrine are cities and municipalities, which are considered to be mere creatures of the legislature, and which have no inherent power and must exercise delegated power strictly within the limitations prescribed by the state legislature. As such, by default, municipalities are liable for their actions unless shielded by state law.

Today, many state tort claims acts are modeled after the FTCA and constitute a statutory general waiver of sovereign immunity allowing tort claims against the state, with certain exceptions, or reenact immunity with limited waivers that apply only to certain types of claims. Some of these acts are called, "Tort Claims Acts," but many others are given different names. State claims acts (as opposed to tort claims acts) are another type of statute that limit immunity and establish a procedure for bringing claims against a state government.

State laws may provide for "discretionary function" exceptions to state liability (a discretionary function exception retains state immunity for essential governmental functions that require the exercise of discretion or judgment, such as planning or policy level decisions). These "discretionary functions" are distinguished from "ministerial" or "operational" functions that involve only the execution of policies and set tasks. State may also employ a "misrepresentation exception" to state liability (a misrepresentation exception means immunity still applies in certain cases of governmental failure to communicate correct information).

These acts sometimes establish a special court of claims, board, or commission to determine such claims, and often limit damages or provide for certain exceptions to liability. Connecticut, Illinois, Kentucky, North Carolina, and Ohio use this approach.

Premises Liability

In cases involving premises liability, many states provide immunity or limit liability for premises defects. This is done by establishing a relatively low standard of care owed to those on government property, such as requiring that the government exercise that level of care which a private person would owe a licensee, instead of the "ordinary care" standard that has been adopted by most states for actions between private parties. In addition, some states create different standards of care depending on the type of defect at issue ("special defect" is an unusual danger which is more dangerous than most defects), and whether the injured party paid to use the property.

Operation of Motor Vehicle

Many states expressly provide for waiver of immunity for property damage, personal injury, or death caused by the wrongful act or omission or the negligence of a state employee acting within the scope of employment and arising out of the operation or use of a motor-driven vehicle or motor-driven equipment. This liability may even be extended to the operation of emergency vehicles, which are permitted to disregard traffic rules and the speed limit, provided it displays its lights and sirens while doing so. Even then, it must exercise "due regard" for the safety of the motoring public. Regrettably, this is not always done with the foreseeable result that innocent third parties at the wrong place at the wrong time are injured. Most states provide for a waiver of sovereign immunity for the negligent operation of governmental vehicles, but the burden is on the plaintiff to establish that the emergency vehicle exceeded the liberties given to it under state law by failing to exercise their emergency lights and siren and/or by disregarding the due regard for the safety of the public. Other states, like Alabama, strongly preserve sovereign immunity, even for motor vehicle accidents.

Highway Defect Statutes

Enacting highway defect statutes is another specific way of waiving the sovereign immunity of state transportation departments. This approach focuses on the potential liability of a state Department of Transportation, whereas a general waiver of sovereign immunity exposes a state to tort liability on any theory. For example, the highway defect statute established in Connecticut states: "Any person injured in person or property through the neglect or default of the state or any of its employees by means of any defective highway, bridge, or sidewalk which it is the duty of the commissioner of transportation to keep in repair...may bring a civil action." C.G.S.A. § 13a-144. Since highway defect statutes are different from Tort Claims Acts, it must be determined whether a plaintiff's claim is associated to a "road defect" statute or arises under the Tort Claims Act. Under a defect statute, the question is whether the claimant's injuries were actually caused from a defect that arose within the meaning of the statute. In other words, was the highway defect in itself defined to be the cause of liability? However, the focus with a Tort Claims Act is whether the injury was the result of a negligent act by a governmental entity. These differences are what separate a "highway defect statute" from a "Tort Claims Act".

Notice Requirements

State Tort Claims Acts usually require that a certain type of notice be given to the governmental entity within a certain period of time and containing very specific information. Failure to provide sufficient notice can be fatal to an action against a governmental entity and constitute a complete bar to an action. These statutes usually specify that a plaintiff must provide the governmental entity with notice of the name and address of the plaintiff, date, place, and circumstances of the occurrence or transaction giving rise to the claim asserted, a general description of the injury, damage, or loss incurred, the name of the public entities or employees causing the injury, damage or loss, and the specific amount of damages claimed (i.e., a "sum certain"). Many states require such notice to be submitted on a form that they provide or specify.

Monetary Limits or Caps

State law often provides monetary damage limitations of "caps" on the amount of money that can be recovered from a governmental entity. At least 33 states' Acts limit, or "cap," the monetary amount for damages that may be recovered from judgments against the state, and at least 29 states (often in combination with a cap) prohibit a judgment against the state from including punitive or exemplary damages. Texas, for example provides a per person limit of $250,000 for claims against the State, a $100,000 limit for claims against local governments, and a $250,000 limit for claims against municipalities. The New Jersey Tort Claims Act, on the other hand, provides for a verbal threshold which states that, "No damages shall be awarded against a public entity or public employee for pain and suffering resulting from any injury; provided, however, that this limitation on the recovery of damages for pain and suffering shall not apply in cases of permanent loss of a bodily function, permanent disfigurement or dismemberment where the medical treatment expenses are in excess of $ 3,600." Damage caps are often set between $100,000 and $1 million. Some states, such as Arkansas and California, have no damage caps. At least 33 states' Acts limit, or "cap," the monetary amount for damages that may be recovered from judgments against the state, and at least 29 states (often in combination with a cap) prohibit a judgment against the state from including punitive or exemplary damages.

Public Duty Doctrine

Separate and apart from the concepts of sovereign immunity and official immunity, some states adopt the Public Duty Doctrine. It can serve as an exception to immunity in the performance of a governmental or discretionary act. The Public Duty Doctrine states that a public employee is not civilly liable for the breach of a duty owed to the general public, rather than a particular individual. This Public Duty Doctrine is based on the absence of a duty to the particular individual, as contrasted to the duty owed to the general public. This doctrine does not insulate a public employee from all liability, as he or she could still be found liable for a breach of ministerial duties in which an injured party had a "special, direct, and distinctive interest." See, e.g., Southern v. City of Farmington, 263 S.W.3d 603 (Mo. 2008). It is not an affirmative defense, but rather delineates the legal duty the defendant public employee owes the plaintiff. In effect, the applicability of the Public Duty Doctrine negates the duty element required to prove negligence, such that there can be no cause of action for injuries sustained as the result of an alleged breach of public duty to the community as a whole.

Federal Civil Rights Liability (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

The Federal Civil Rights Statute is the basis by which a state or local government employee can assert a civil rights claim. Section 1983 provides:

Every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress.

The most common claims brought under § 1983 are for violation of constitutional rights, including:

- First Amendment rights of freedom of religion, speech, and press.
- Fourth Amendment protections against searches and seizures.
- Fifth Amendment protection from self-incrimination.
- Eighth Amendment protection against cruel and unusual punishment.
- Fourteenth Amendment protections against deprivations of life, liberty or property without due process.

"Any citizen" can bring a § 1983 action against any person who, while acting "under color of state law" deprives the plaintiff of his or her constitutional rights and that challenged conduct caused a constitutional violation. The "color of law" element is established where a public employee acts pursuant to his or her office or in his or her official capacity.

Jurisdiction

Suits against the states must be brought in state court. The 11th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution limits private actions brought against states in federal court. It provides:

The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by Citizens of another State, or by Citizens or Subjects of any foreign State.

This Amendment prevents federal courts from exercising jurisdiction over state defendants. A federal court will not even hear the case if a state is the defendant. A state may not be sued in federal court by its own citizen or a citizen of another state, unless the state consents to jurisdiction. Eleventh Amendment immunity extends to suits filed against the state in state courts and before federal administrative agencies. Unless the state or the federal government creates an exception to the state's sovereign immunity, the state is immune from being sued without consent by any citizen in federal courts, state courts, or before federal administrative agencies.

NOTE: This chart concerns itself with the immunity granted to and liability of individual state governments and their employees. Issues regarding the immunity granted to and liability of "political subdivisions" (i.e., local government entities created by the states to help fulfill their obligations, including counties, cities, towns, villages, and special districts such as school districts, water districts, park districts, and airport districts) are addressed in our sister chart entitled "Municipal/County/Local Governmental Immunity and Tort Liability in All 50 States found HERE."

TWENTY-FOURTH NORTHERN MARIANAS COMMONWEALTH

LEGISLATURE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

_____ Session, 2025

H.B. 24-57

A BILL FOR AN ACT

To re-establish a Government Liability Cap.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE 24TH NORTHERN MARIANAS
COMMONWEALTH LEGISLATURE:

1 Section 1. Findings and Purpose. Sovereign immunity protects the 2 government and its employees from being sued in court absent express permission
3 from the Legislature. In the NMI Supreme Court case of Maratita v. CHCC, 2024
4 MP 10, the Court applied the equal protection clause of the CNMI Constitution and 5 found insufficient specific support. The Court rejected the Legislature’s statutory 6 establishment of a cap on damages to be paid by the Commonwealth for the 7 negligent acts of its employees and created a statutory vacuum. The Maratita
8 decision undermines the separation of powers, damages the principle of sovereign 9 immunity, and creates an emergency threat to the ongoing fiscal stability of the 10 CNMI. This Act responds to that portion of the decision concerning government 11 liability caps.

12 Equal protection, as interpreted in Maratita, requires that any liability cap
13 be supported by factual findings—such as actuarial studies, testimony, or statistical

1 reports—demonstrating that the means chosen are not arbitrary. The Legislature
2 expressly acknowledges that standard and complies with it here by tying the re-
3 established caps to concrete fiscal realities.

4 Public fiscal stability requires rational limits. In 1983, when the Legislature
5 first enacted a limited waiver of sovereign immunity through Public Law 15-22, the 6 CNMI's total budget was approximately $51 million. Today, for Fiscal Year 2026,
7 the Commonwealth identified total budgetary resources of $179,701,969. After 8 mandatory earmarks, debt service, and settlement obligations totaling $41,872,250,
9 only $127,455,066 in General Revenues remains available for appropriation.
10 Annual debt service consumes $12.9 million, while healthcare (CHCC and 11 Medicaid) requires over $141 million and utilities (CUC) require over $102 million.
12 These fiscal realities demonstrate that the caps of $50,000 for wrongful death, 13 $100,000 per person, and $200,000 per occurrence are rationally related to 14 preserving stability while still providing meaningful recovery.

15 As the Commonwealth budget has grown, so too have governmental 16 expenses. The CNMI now faces many more employees, larger operational costs,
17 nondiscretionary obligations, and substantial debt, which has required borrowing
18 to maintain a balanced budget. Revenue has been inconsistent, disrupted by natural 19 disasters, a pandemic, and geopolitical changes that have impacted tourism. If there 20 were not reasonable caps on damages, large judgments could force the government 21 to furlough or fire employees, eliminate health or retirement benefits, or borrow

1 unsustainably to cover liabilities.

2 Reasonable caps set forth in this legislation are consistent with national 3 practice. Massachusetts, with a population of 7 million and a budget of $60 billion, 4 applies a $100,000 cap, upheld under equal protection in Hallet v. Town of 5 Wrentham, 499 N.E.2d 1189 (Mass. 1986). Virginia, with a population of 9 million
6 and a budget of $83.8 billion, applies caps of $100,000 or the state's insurance
7 coverage, whichever is greater. Nevada, a fellow Ninth Circuit jurisdiction with a
8 population of 3 million and a budget of $18 billion, applies a $100,000 cap upheld
9 multiple times under equal protection, with the Nevada Supreme Court expressly 10 rejecting heightened scrutiny. State v. Silva, 478 P.2d 591 (Nev. 1970); Arnesano
11 v. State, 942 P.2d 139 (Nev. 1997). Guam, with a population of 173,000 and a 12 budget of $1.3 billion, upheld its caps of $100,000 for wrongful death and $300,000
13 for other tort actions in Newby v. Gov't of Guam, 2010 Guam 4, confirming that 14 such limits do not violate equal protection.

15 Any government that fails to control litigation costs risks catastrophic losses
16 and disruption of essential services. The Legislature further finds that the costs of 17 death claims and injury treatment have increased substantially since the original 18 caps were enacted in 1983, while the number of claimants has also increased with 19 population and government growth. Without caps, even valid claims could go 20 unpaid because the government's limited revenues would be overwhelmed.

21 Taxpayer stewardship requires balance. The Legislature has weighed the

1 need for meaningful recovery against the responsibility to preserve essential
2 services, respect the separation of powers, maintain sovereign immunity, and 3 ensure stable operations. The re-established caps reflect that careful balance,
4 consistent with mainstream American law and with the Commonwealth's fiscal 5 constraints.

6 Equal branches must respect their constitutional roles. The Legislature
7 emphasizes that it retains full constitutional authority to waive or withhold 8 sovereign immunity at its discretion; this exercise of factual detail is provided out
9 of prudence, not necessity, given the Legislature's absolute authority to enact
10 legislation. The judiciary may interpret the law, but it cannot dictate it.¹

11 Section 2. Amendment. 7 CMC § 2202 of the Commonwealth Code is 12 hereby repealed and enacted to read as follows:

13 § 2202. Limitation of Tort Liability.

14 (a) The Commonwealth government shall be liable in tort for damages arising from 15 the negligent acts of employees of the Commonwealth acting within the scope of 16 their office or employment; provided, that:

17 (1) The Commonwealth and any employees engaged in the performance
18 of services on behalf of the Commonwealth shall not be liable in tort

¹ The judicial branch is also protected by the common law doctrine of judicial immunity, which is typically applied as absolute immunity. There may not be any pending litigation suggesting that such judicial immunity is subject to review as a violation of equal protection, but opinions such as Maratita could raise the issue and put the courts in the same exposed position of having no liability caps.

1 for more than $50,000 in an action for wrongful death. Liability in 2 other tortious occurrences shall be limited to $100,000 per person,
3 or $200,000 per occurrence. The Commonwealth shall not be liable
4 for any cause of action arising out of willful and wanton or reckless 5 conduct of an employee of the Commonwealth.

7 (2) The Commonwealth shall not be liable for interest prior to 8 judgment, court fees, witness fees, or for punitive damages.

9 (3) If the Commonwealth is insured for a greater amount, the 10 governmental liability shall be the same as the insurance coverage.

11 (4) This section does not in any way impair, limit or modify the 12 rights and obligations under any government insurance policy.

13 (5) When the population of the Commonwealth reaches more than 14 100,000 people according to the Federal census, the amounts set in this 15 subsection shall be increased by $50,000 each.

16 (b) An action shall not be instituted upon a claim against the Commonwealth for 17 money damages for injury or loss of property or personal injury or death caused by 18 the negligent act or omission of any employee of the Commonwealth while acting 19 within the scope of his/her employment, unless the claimant shall have first 20 presented the claim, which shall name the particular employee(s), to the Attorney
21 General and the claim shall have been finally denied by the Attorney General, in

1 writing, and the claimant so notified. The failure of the Attorney General to make
2 final disposition of a claim within 90 days after it is presented shall be deemed a
3 final denial of the claim for purposes of this section. The provisions of this section
4 shall not apply to such claims as may be properly asserted as third party complaints,
5 counterclaims, or cross-claims under the Commonwealth Rules of Civil Procedure
6 in a civil action. Every claim shall be presented within one year after the cause of 7 action accrues.

8 (c) Action shall not be later instituted for any sum in excess of the amount of the 9 claim presented to the Attorney General, except where the increased amount is 10 based upon newly discovered evidence not reasonably discoverable at the time of 11 presentation of the claim, or upon allegation and proof of intervening facts relating 12 to the amount of the claim.

13 (d) Disposition of any claim by the Attorney General shall not be competent 14 evidence of liability or amount of damages.

15 (e) There shall be no jury trials of tort actions against the Commonwealth or its 16 employees unless the Commonwealth consents in writing before trial.

17 (f) Given the similarity between the federal and CNMI constitutional equal
18 protection clauses, judicial review, if any, of this section shall apply great weight 19 to the findings of the legislature and a standard of review consistent with federal 20 law.

1 Section 3. Severability. If any provisions of this Act or the application of 2 any such provision to any person or circumstance should be held invalid by a court
3 of competent jurisdiction, the remainder of this Act or the application of its
4 provisions to persons or circumstances other than those to which it is held invalid
5 shall not be affected thereby. However, if any provisions of this Act regarding the 6 caps on the amount of damages shall be declared unconstitutional by a court, the 7 Legislature intends that any and all waiver of sovereign immunity is withdrawn and 8 no permission for making a claim or receiving damages is given, thereby rendering 9 this entire Act void and resulting in the dismissal of any pending and subsequent 10 claim(s) as a violation of sovereign immunity.

11 Section 4. Savings Clause. This Act shall apply immediately to all pending
12 litigation occurring under the Government Liability Act, 7 CMC §§ 2201, et seq.

13 Section 5. Effective Date. This Act shall take effect upon its approval by 14 the Governor, or it becoming law without such approval.
